You Are the Boss It Is Up to You about the kind of Sausage you are going to serve your people this season

There are so many makers of Sausage, it is difficult to classify or comment upon the variety of meat offered in this article.

But this is certain—

The Careful Buyer Will Order:

MONMOUTH PORK SAUSAGE

He knows that he is getting the best that healthful, selected young porkers will produce—not the gristly, stringy or coarse portions.

Nothing but the lean trimmings of fresh ham and choice tender cuts go into the making of Monmouth Sausage. The seasonings are selected in the grain, cleaned and ground here, and employed with the best of care. Monmouth Sausage is made up as pure and tender as butter. It is the most healthful and delicious you can buy.

Have you tried it? Is it not worth while to do so? Why not write us?

The Tea of Your Fancy

YOU have loved good tea, but you have sought better tea. Time and again you've been tempted and disappointed. Somehow your tea never quite kept its promise. It never seemed all that tea might be.

You could describe this tea from your fancy. Other teas have suggested this perfect flavor. Others have faintly forecast its aroma.

Yet your ideal of a perfect tea was no idle dream. It actually exists as PEEK'S PERFECT TEA.

In PEEK'S PERFECT TEA you have the realization of the tea you have longed for.

None but the finest and most fragrant leaves are used for Peek's. Our expert tea tasters in the Orient select, for this purpose, only those teas containing the choicest attributes of fine tea—flavor, delicacy, aroma and richness. When their selections reach us, our tea experts here go over them again and reject any that may have been affected by the long sea voyage. This double safeguard by experts at both ends is your tea insurance. Fine as these selections are, they still have to undergo the important process of vacuum-cleaning to remove all fluff and extraneous matter (natural to all tea) that would otherwise impair the cup result. After this last perfecting process, we pack the tea by machinery in air-tight cans that preserve its fineness to the last spoonful. This best possible tea must reach you in the best possible condition.

Let THIS be YOUR day to try Peek's Tea. Why defer this delight another hour?

Peek's Perfect Tea is sold by all good stores in 10c., 25c., 50c., and 75c. air-tight canisters

The Celebrated MOSLER Patent Fireproof Safe, affords the highest degree of protection to its contents. Among other unique features of construction, it has a heavy crescent shape welded angle frame going around all corners, thereby lending great structural strength and precluding the possibility of warping or fracture or disjoining in fire or in falling.

The Mosler Patent Screw Door, Bank Safe, Manganese Bank Safe, and Corliss Bank Safes, are considered by experts to be the last word in burglar protection.

McKENNA'S BAND

An episode at the Sturges Stand in the days of Yore, which business is now conducted by the son, George Washington Sturges

An actual reproduction of an old photo taken in Washington Market, showing the stand of M. J. Sturges, during the Christmas holidays. The figure in black, standing in foreground is Cornelius Vanderbilt. All meat displayed in this picture was slaughtered and dressed, personally by Mr. M. J. Sturges, which he afterwards donated to charitable institutions.

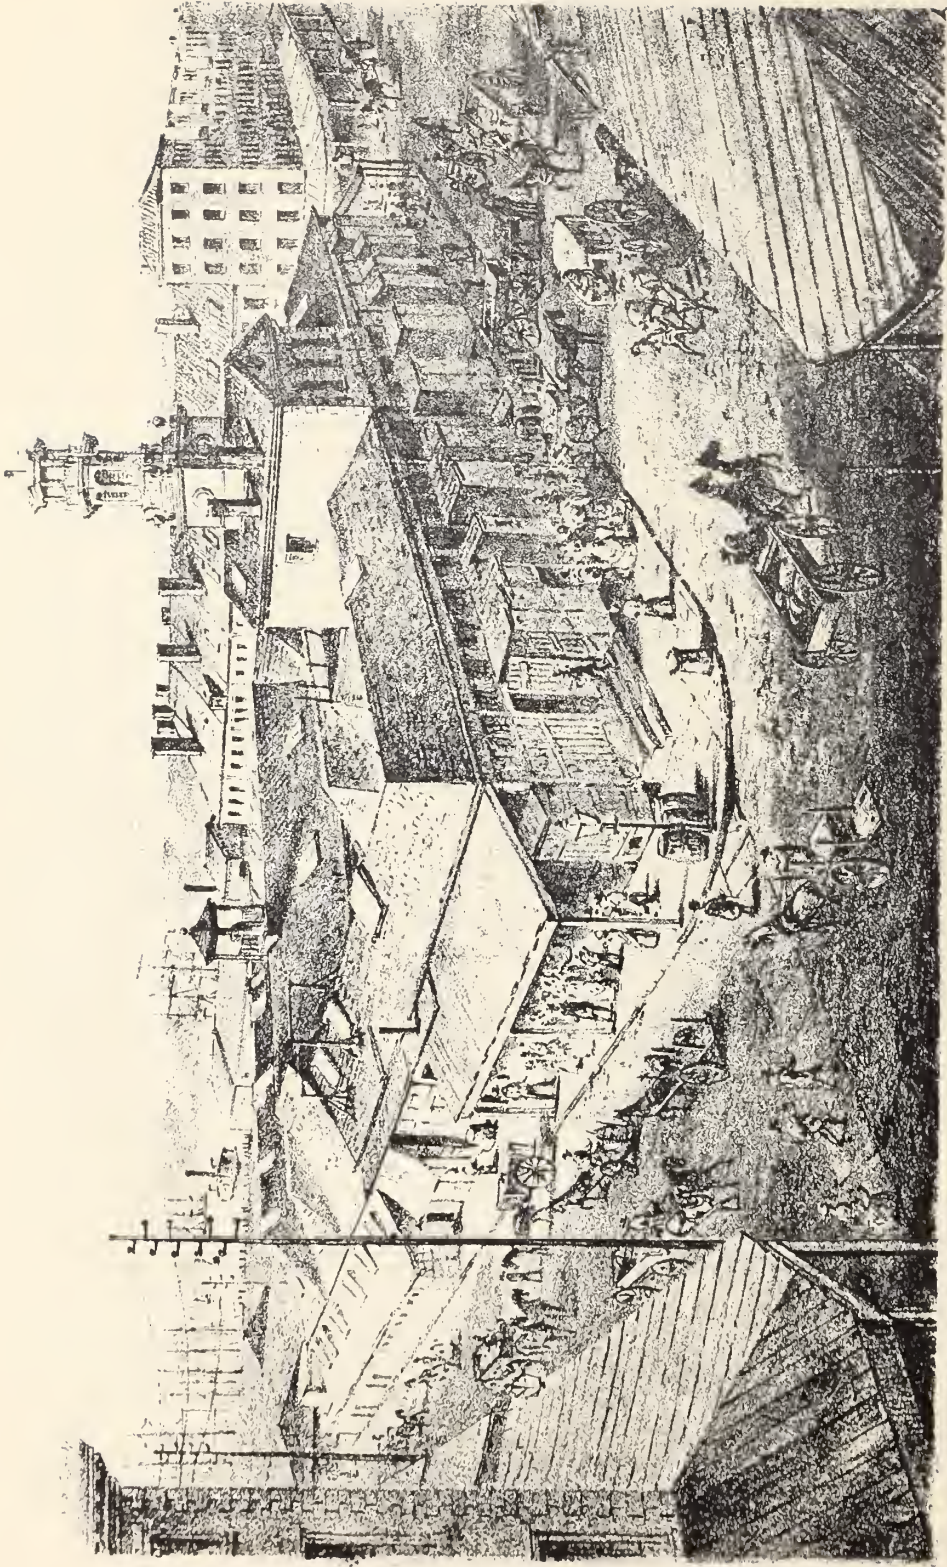

*High in the midst of this most happy land
A well-built white pyramid does stand;
By which spectators know the time o' the day
From beams reflecting of the solar ray;
Its basis with ascending steps is grac'd,
Around whose cleanly purveyors plac'd,
Vend their most wholesome food, by nature good,
To cheer the spirits and enrich the blood.*

HIS little verse is penned to commemorate the foresight, courage and ability of all those who have joined with the members of the Washington Market Merchants' Association, in causing the reconstruction of our nationally famous market.

It seems as though everybody has seen Washington Market—certainly from the outside if not the inside and upon reflection the writer is reminded of the one hundred and three years of unbroken service to the public, rendered from this grand old landmark now the last word in marketdom.

One is brought back to the times when many a good old-fashioned glee such as "The Chough and Crow" and many a cheery chorus, was sung; here many a succulent kidney and devilled bone, not unaccompanied by the flouriest of baked potatoes, were consumed in the good old days of long ago. The hum of life, the encounters of wits and statesmen, the busy throng of poets, and critics, the full flushed tide of blood that animated the scholars, the traders, the intriguing courtiers and the many headed mob who long since dead once hustled and pushed and throve and elbowed their way to their own objects in the streets and squares hereabout, that know them no more—these, all, have gone before. Thus is this scene of historic interest vividly impressed upon the minds of our merchants whose motto is "par excellence"—whose standard shall continue to be in keeping with the days of yore when Washington Market, New York, first marked the shopping haunt of the fashionable.

EXTERIOR VIEW OF WASHINGTON MARKET, 1812

Today, the tenant of the new Washington Market engages in trade an heterogeneous collection of humanity. Every day one may observe a concourse of people coming this way. Here and there amongst the crowd of shoppers are to be seen a couple of nuns in their sombre garments; whilst a few sweet-faced nurses in uniform, with bunches of flowers under their arms wherewith to refresh the wards in the great city hospitals, add a splash of colour to the animated scene.

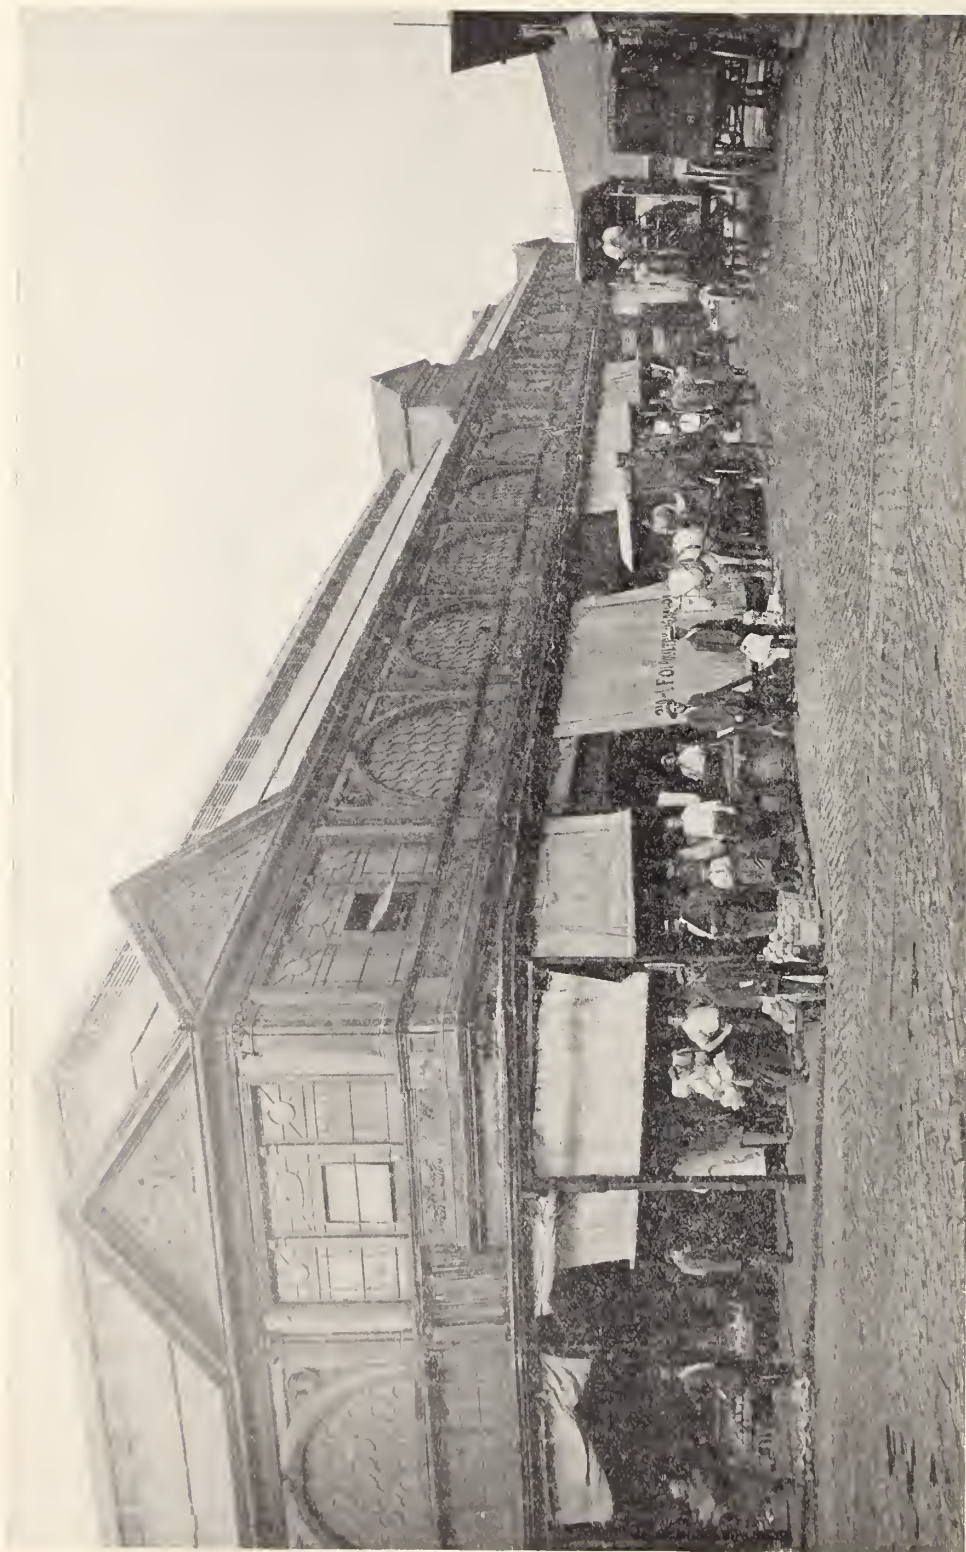

Looking through New Market

Short are the intervals of lull, many and entertaining are the hours of rush and merry bustle augmented by shoppers from all parts of the Greater City and the surrounding country.

At sunrise the Market belches forth its vast quantities to the hotels and then again for a brief period it gradually quietens down as it were, to a well earned rest, only to swell suddenly as the evening trade holds forth; then again is the market noisy and full of life, distributing thousands of packages of produce to a vicious metropolis. Such is Washington Market, the oldest and the newest public market in the City—it might be said, in the country—and it is open for your inspection and service. Old in tradition and experience; new in method and equipment.

Known, wherever food is produced, as a place to sell; known to millions of consumers, as a place to buy, served by merchants, rich in knowledge of the retailing of food; equipped with the latest devices making for efficiency and sanitation, it presents to you unsurpassed opportunity for selection and economy in the purchase of food.

Following the presentation of a resolution of the Washington Market Merchants Association, placed in the hands of the city fathers and with the co-operation of Mrs. Julian Heath, President of The National Housewives League, the good offices of the Mayor, Borough President, and Comptroller, were enlisted to the cause now accomplished.

VIEW OF WASHINGTON MARKET BEFORE GEORGE MCANENY, BOROUGH PRESIDENT, CAUSED THE REMOVAL OF THE STREET STANDS

The point of agreeing upon the remodeling of the old building; a process urged by the Washington Market Merchants' Association and heartily supported by William A. Prendergast, the work of which was consummated under the jurisdiction and direction of Marcus M. Marks, President of the Borough of Manhattan, and Ralph Folks, Commissioner of Public Works, all of whom labored industriously in behalf of the interests of the City as owners, the merchants as tenants, and the public as consumers.

Colonel Frank H. Hines, Superintendent of Public Buildings and Offices, practical in market construction, devoted his unflagging energy and unqualified support in carrying out the dictates of the city and the wishes of the merchants, which, coupled with his experience and ability, helped to bring into being the Washington Market of to-day; also from the date Chairman Minder and former President Koelsch drove home the first rivet of the new Market, John Boschen, Deputy Commissioner of Public Works, and Sydney Goodacre, Superintendent of Public Markets, rendered a valuable service in conjunction with those hereinbefore mentioned.

The goal always in view, in the remodeling of Washington Market, has been increased efficiency and sanitation. More business can be done on the same area, with more convenience and economy, both to the consumer and the merchant. The food will be better and more wholesome; the purchasing of it easier and quicker.

What has been done can best be illustrated by comparing the old market with the old part of the City, for here is an entire City block, amounting to an acre in extent, the use of which, as a market, began during the war of 1812 and on which a public market has ever since existed. The Market is a community in itself, consisting of over one hundred property owners, with its customs, traditions and arrangements older than those of many American cities.

The aisles and passageways had come to be looked upon almost in the light of the streets of an old city and in their windings and turnings they resemble the streets of Boston and the older part of New York. When the present building was erected in 1884, this internal arrangement was not changed, the established layout being allowed to remain inside of a new shell.

It came to pass in this community, as in many municipalities, that the arrangements, which had grown up from the past, did not meet modern needs or ideals of efficiency. Narrow, crooked passageways caused confusion and congestion of traffic, just as they do in cities which have grown; but stand-holders had remained so long in the same location, that it was a tradition and to change things seemed almost as impossible as to re-locate the streets of a city and reapportion the block areas to former owners.

The conditions were intolerable and the progressive merchants, broader and more far-sighted than many property owners in larger communities, saw that the only means of getting real relief lay in each one throwing his interest into the melting pot and, after a complete rearrangement, to take equivalent space in the newly arranged area, and to this end Charles H. Higgins was engaged as engineer and architect by both the City and merchants. In many ways, this was as revolutionary as it would be in a city, for each merchant had, on the area which he occupied, built structures representing an outlay proportionate to the old buildings in the city. It is true that most of these structures were obsolete as, for example, the towering ice boxes, which were used for refrigeration; but when men have stood—as some of these men have—in the same spot since before the Civil War, having succeeded their fathers at that stand, it was just as truly a serious business to agree to these changes as for property owners in an old part of a city, where streets are crooked and structures obsolete, to agree to any rearrangement of streets and reapportionment of property. Yet, in each case the ultimate common good to all is obvious.

It speaks volumes for the broadmindedness of these merchants that, under the leadership of their President, Carl A. Koelsch, they could agree and urge upon the City, such drastic changes in the common interest—changes which represent heavy expenditure, part by the City, who is the owner of the property, and a part, exceeding one-half, to be borne by the individual merchants in rebuilding and re-equipping their stalls. The part to be paid for by the City will be borne by the merchants, through increased rentals. The justice of this the merchants recognize and they have not asked for a single dollar to be given them, but only that those things which relate to the common interest, be done by the City.

The City has paid for tearing out the interior, leaving only the old shell; the laying of new water and drainage systems; the building of a sanitary floor, of cement and terrazzo; the erection of counter fronts, which fix the new and efficient arrangement of aisles; building of a mezzanine floor around the Market, increasing the floor area by more than one-third and by thus giving space for storage and rough work; increasing the area on the main floor available for display and sale of food products. The installation of a modern, mechanical refrigerating plant, which will afford temperatures at each stand suitable for the product dealt in; the installation of a new lighting system and the erection of a distinctive and uniform series of metal and glass sign boards and, in addition, making minor repairs and improvements.

After careful consideration and many conferences, it was decided to make a white Market and the idea has been carried out, white being relieved with olive green. The color was chosen, because it typifies the cleanliness which is the keynote of the Market.

As the part of this improvement to be paid for by the City neared completion, the time for the individual merchants to build and equip their stalls approached and to insure a harmonious whole, the Borough President published general rules, known as "Regulations for Fixtures." It had been found by the merchants and laid before the Borough President, that one of the principal reasons for the old Market being in an extremely disorderly, uninviting and unsanitary condition, for the handling and sale of food products, was the lack of regulation of individual merchants as to the arrangement of stalls, which resulted in a disorderly and unsightly arrangement of rails, counters, ice boxes, signs and other appurtenances.

In the repairs, alterations and remodeling of Washington Market, which has been carried out according to well laid plans, the rearranged Market has been laid out like a miniature city; the aisles being similar to streets, the sections to blocks and the stalls to lots, each stall being provided with access to water, drainage, refrigeration, electric current, gas and telephone. Within the stall lines, the tenants are expected to build and connect their fixtures under regulations designed to prevent the disorder resulting from unregulated individual initiative, which formed the tenth complaint of the merchants, as to the former condition of the market and which is illustrated, to some extent, by the photograph.

In order that the fixtures, such as counters, show cases, refrigerators, offices, signs, lighting, etc., may present a neat and orderly appearance and hold a harmonious relation to one another and the whole, certain lines were maintained throughout.

With the purpose of accomplishing the harmonious relation of parts necessary for efficiency and to assure that the parts shall be of form, color and material necessary for a sanitary, modern market—all of which is necessary for the common good—the “Regulations” were prepared.

Before the demolition, which necessarily preceded the remodeling, provision to maintain the continuity of the Market was made, by building a temporary structure in the streets surrounding three sides of the old building and in these quarters the merchants have maintained the Market while the builders were working inside. Washington Market is an old New York institution, brought up to date.

The market was first started on June 1st, 1812, and in 1912, its centennial was celebrated. The northern limits of the City in 1812 did not extend above Thirty-fourth street, the most thickly populated district being from Bowling Green to Green's Meadow, in the vicinity of East Fourteenth street of today. Prior to the opening of Washington Market, there were several smaller markets, the biggest being “Fly Market” and “Bear Market.”

The new market proved a good business venture from the start, many of the butchers from the old markets taking stands there. Prices of provisions were very high, because of the war with England. In 1815, the centre part of the Market on Washington street was two stories high and on it stood a cupola and bell. These upper stories were used for a watch-house for the "First District Watch."

During 1818, there were thirty-five regular stands in the Market and it was the custom to give exhibitions of cattle. The stalls were decorated and considerable rivalry was excited through these exhibits. In 1834, an appropriation of $3,325 was made and approved by the Mayor, for a new building on the east side and adjoining West street, running from Vesey to Fulton streets, afterward known as the "Country and Fish Market." In 1847, further improvements were made and buildings erected on ground that had been filled in between Fulton and Vesey streets and fronting on West street. In July, 1860, the market was almost destroyed by fire. About 200 sheds were burned and there was a loss of about $400 to each of the occupants.

The present building was erected in 1883 and 1884, during the administration of Mayor Franklin Edson. Up to 1910, the sidewalks around the market were always obstructed by stalls around the outside of the building, and Mr. McAneny, when Borough President, had these stalls removed, leaving the sidewalks unincumbered.

The Present Refrigeration System

The refrigerating plant at the Washington Market consists of one (1) 9 in. x 12 in. and one (1) 11½ in. x 15 in. vertical, single acting, refrigerating machines capable of doing more work than could be done by 50 tons of ice in one day.

These machines were manufactured by the York Manufacturing Co., of York, Pa., and were installed, together with the auxiliary equipment and the piping throughout the building for the various booths, by the Shipley Construction & Supply Co. of Brooklyn.

Machinery Refrigerating, Washington Market

A.C. WICKE MFG. CO.

Market Outfitters

406-412 East 102nd St. New York

The plant is operated by electric motors aggregating about 125 horse power.

At the present time the refrigerating plant serves 47 booth holders, for which there is an aggregate of approximately 10,000 feet of pipe coils. These are connected with the main engineroom by distributing mains totalling about 1,000 feet. The total amount of space cooled is 25,000 cubic feet.

With the booths filled to capacity and all the boxes operating at the same time the machines will maintain a temperature of about freezing.

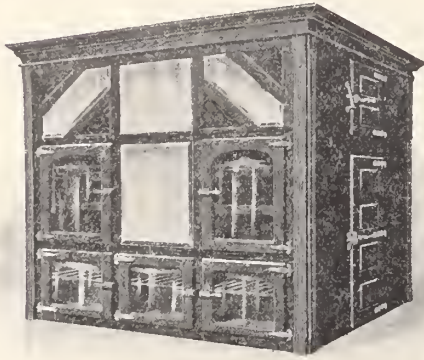

Electric Brine Control

Under the present arrangements it is possible for a booth holder to admit more or less cold brine through box coils, in accordance with the temperature one wishes to carry, to suit the material in the box. If one desires, one may disconnect the refrigerator from the system entirely by the manipulation of valves.

The refrigerating plant does away entirely with the work of renewing ice in the boxes daily, carrying with it the necessary annoyance caused by labor and dirt. Two other points of advantage obtained with the use of a refrigerating plant of this style, is the ability to adjust the temperature of the boxes as against the limited temperature range obtained from ice, and the possibility of obtaining temperatures below 40 degrees, which is seldom the case when ice is used. Of course all who inspect the booths will be impressed with the cleanliness and sanitation effected by the use of mechanical refrigeration as compared with the old style of cooling with ice. This applies equally as well to small individual refrigerating plants, as used by the butcher operating a store.

I am the oldest criminal in history.
I have acted in my present capacity for many thousands of years.
I have been trusted with millions of dollars.
I have lost a great deal of this money.
I have constantly held temptation before those who have come in contact with me.
I have placed a burden upon the strong, and broken down the weak.
I have caused the downfall of many honest and ambitious young people.
I have ruined many business men who deserved success.
I have betrayed the trust of those who have depended upon me.
I am a thing of the past, a dead issue.
I am a failure.

WHO I AM

I am the merchant's friend.
I do brain work, but have no brain! I work fast, early and late and am too stupid to make a blunder.
You find me in every country; my voice rings out around the world.
I speak every language, tell the truth, and nothing but the truth.
When I speak, millions listen: (1) The Caucasians, (2) the Mongolians, (3) the Ethiopians, (4) the Malaysians, (5) the Indians.
I need no food, but live as long as metal endures.
I handle all kinds of money, (1) Gold, (2) Silver, (3) Nickel, (4) Copper, (5) Paper in all currencies.
I make unchangeable records of all I do.
I remove temptation and shorten the hours of labor for the merchant.
I protect the weak and strengthen the strong.
